Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 16 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Turning mostly dry and settled.

Today:
Low cloud and outbreaks of rain and drizzle moving southeastwards, though many southern parts staying dry. Sunnier skies following from the northwest. Mild for many, and feeling warm in the sunshine.

Tonight:
Cloud clearing from southeast England then clear skies for most. Breezy in the east, but light winds in the west where a frost is likely, along with some fog patches.

Wednesday:
Most parts dry with sunny spells; sunniest in the west where it will feel warm. Cloudier in the east, perhaps with a few coastal showers.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Although many areas will remain dry with variable cloud cover, there will in drizzle affecting north and western areas and light showers of rain affecting the southeast at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.